A gorgeous little hotel on the Cornish coastline with glass everywhere framing huge views of ocean and headland. In summer, comfy chairs are strategically placed on the decked terrace so you can gaze out at your leisure, read a book, or sip your holiday cocktail. Godrevy Lighthouse twinkles to the right, St Ives slips into the sea on the left, the wide sands of Carbis Bay and Lelant shimmer between.

Back inside, white walls and big mirrors soak up the light. You get bleached boards and smart sofas in the sitting room, fresh flowers in the dining room. Airy bedrooms are delightfully uncluttered, with silky throws, padded headboards, and crisp linen. For a treat stay in one of the 'Celebration' rooms; all have the breathtaking view – you can even enjoy it from the bath in one.

A steep coastal path leads down to St Ives, mazy streets snake up to the Tate, home of international modern and contemporary art, where you can easily lose a whole day wandering around the exhibitions. For sustenance you really must head for the Porthminster Beach Café. Kick off with a Gordon's® Fizz on the deck as you prepare for a locally-sourced feast – Helford River oysters with chorizo and wasabi mayonnaise or Porthminster fish and chips – vegetables and herbs come from their own garden over the way. Sublime.
